Talking to people about your designs might seem like a basic skill, but it can be difficult to do efficiently and well. And, in many cases, how you communicate about your work with stakeholders, clients, and other non-designers is more critical than the designs themselves—simply because the most articulate person usually wins.

Even though this is always a risk, approaching our meetings with this fear actually undermines the purpose of articulating design decisions. If we aren't able to convince stakeholders that our solution is better, either we aren't doing a good job of communicating to them or we don't understand their needs enough to create a design that ...

Articulating Design Decisions :: UXmatters

In Articulating Design Decisions, Tom Greever discusses the fact that despite the ability to speak to the form and function of how designs can solve problems (things that designers understand), many designers have yet to master the art of explaining these things to non-designers. Design communication isn't a skill that comes easy or quickly.
