The Inner City Mother Goose

The Inner City Mother Goose makes no pretense of appealing to children. Someday, perhaps, the rhymes' biting, ironic commentary will be so far removed from reality that they become nonsense, but that day seems no closer than it was 27 years ago when the first edition of The Inner City Mother Goose was published as an adult book.

"The Inner City Mother Goose" is a set of poems that are adapted from traditional nursery rhymes to depict the realities of inner-city life. For example, there are poems called "Sing a Song of Subways" (inspired by "Sing a Song of Sixpence") and "Twelve Rooftops Leaping" (based on "The Twelve Days of Christmas").
